- Has offensive, sensitive or contentious connotations (for example, sexual, violent, drug related, perverse or racial content).
- Has negative political or anti law references (for example, gang related names or conflicts with road safety messages).
- Is likely to incite or promote hatred including, but not limited to, negative religious or cult references.
- Is a registered name of a company or business, and the applicant is not the Director of the company or business for which the plate is requested.
- Is ambiguous and plate characters not easily identifiable.
- Is in contravention of any State or Commonwealth Legislation (for example ANZAC, NAVY, RAN, AFC, RAAF).
- Is a close resemblance of character combinations of an existing registered plate or PlatesWA series.
- Is any of the above in a language other than English or could be read by using a rear view mirror.

How long will it take for my optional plates to be ready?

Once you have applied and paid for an optional plate, it may take 3 to 4 weeks for your plate to be made. The Department of Transport will send a notification to you when your plates are ready for collection.

How do I collect my optional plates?

Your new plates will be delivered to your nominated Driver and Vehicle Service Centre or Regional Agent. You'll receive a letter advising when they're ready to collect and the necessary documentation you will need to provide.

When collecting your plates, please bring:

- Primary and secondary identification (one ID must contain your signature).
- Your existing number plates, these will be exchanged for your new plates.
- Tools and screws, this will help you attach your new plates for your vehicle (we do not supply screws).

What if I don't have a vehicle to put my optional plates on?

If you do not have a licensed vehicle to attach the number plates to then the plates will be stored by the Department of Transport until you have a suitable licensed vehicle.

Can someone else collect my plates on my behalf?

Yes, you can nominate someone to collect your plates on your behalf. If another person is collecting the plates, they will be required to provide the existing number plates, along with their primary and secondary identification (one ID must show their signature).

How do I attach my new plates to a vehicle?

It's your responsibility to remove the vehicle's existing number plates and attach the new plates using your own tools. We suggest that the vehicle to be fitted with the new plates is left at home and you bring in the old plates to exchange for the new plates.

Optional plates come with pre-drilled holes that are designed for Australian standard vehicles. As vehicle design specifications vary, the Euro Series plates are the only plates manufactured without pre-drilled holes to allow you to position the holes to suit your vehicle. You will need to consider this when arranging to collect and fit your new number plates.

Screws are not supplied with any plates issued by Department of Transport.

What should I do if I want to sell my car without the optional plates?

If you do not want to sell your optional plates with the vehicle, return them to a Driver and Vehicle Services Centre or Department of Transport regional agent to retain and receive a set of WA state (ordinary) plates for the vehicle you are selling. A fee applies.
